2.3.7 - Teaching learning process nurtures creativity, innovativeness, intellectual and thinking skills, empathy, life skills etc. among students

Innovation in education encourages teachers and students to explore, research and use all the tools to uncover something new.It involves a different way of looking at problems and solving them.The thinking process that goes into it will help students develop their creativity and their problem solving skills.

Creativity, innovation and learning: Creativity and innovation are fundamental to all disciplines and essential part of learning process, forming an important dimension of learning how to learn. They are also fundamental to teachers improving their professional practice and to school development. Learning involves challenging, refining and improving understanding by being made to think hard. Sometimes, to understand new concepts and broaden perspectives, our approaches to thinking need to be creative, imaginative and lateral, as well as linear. One characteristic of the creative process that makes it particularly powerful is that it requires not only knowledge and understanding of the domain being investigated, but also a willingness to question and not be constrained by existing knowledge. Learners should understand how they can question or challenge established knowledge to help them to formulate their own understanding, and imagination can play an important role: 'One cannot think creatively unless one has the knowledge with which to think creatively. Creativity represents a balance between knowledge and freeing oneself of that knowledge'

2.7.3 - The progressive performance of students and attainment of professional and personal attributes in line with the PLOs and CLOs is monitored and used for further improvements

The most appropriate assessments to improve guidance in student learning are quizzes, tests, writing assignments, and other assessments that teachers make in their classes on a regular basis. Teachers rely on the results from these assessments because of their direct relationship with classroom teaching goals. Plus, the results are immediate and easy to analyze at the individual student level. To use classroom assessments to improve, however, teachers must change both their approach to assessment and their interpretation of the results. In particular, they need to see their assessment as an integral part of the instruction process and as important in helping students learn. Despite the importance of assessment in education today, some teachers receive very formal training in assessment design or analysis. Lacking specific training, teachers rely too heavily on assessments submitted by the publisher of their textbooks or instructional materials. When no appropriate assessment is available, teachers construct themselves in a disgusting fashion, with questions and essays similar to those their teachers used to use. They form assessment as assessment instruments, to be used primarily after instructional activities are completed and to provide students with grades.
